Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-4, 6, and 13-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Goldberg et al.(U.S.Pat.6,296,606) in view of Patel(U.S.Pat.4,331,161). Goldberg discloses a patient thermal support device that shows many of the features of the claimed invention save the explicitly claimed features of a temperature sensor affixed to a patient. Goldberg shows two inputs to a microprocessor controller from two temperature sensors 202 and 206, a temperature display, a radiant heater 56 and a heater 76. The microprocessor compares the sensor outputs to a setpoint temperature or a default setpoint temperature and continuously calculates a setpoint error. The microprocessor operates to drive the error(derivative with respect to time) to zero and to activate an alarm if needed if a range of values is exceeded. A holdoff period is initiated upon startup. The alarm can be associated with either an under or over temperature condition(Figs. 17-23). Patel discloses a patient sensor continuity detector that explicitly shows a temperature sensor affixed to a patient Figs. 1-5. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the claimed invention to use a thermistor affixed to a patient as taught by Patel because the thermistor is well known in the art as a temperature sensor and can be affixed to a patient with normal adhesive tape to ascertain the patient's skin temperature.

Art Unit: 3742

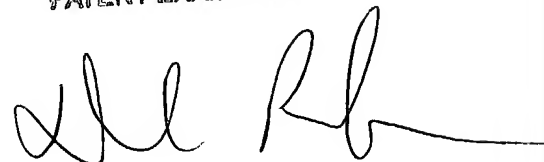

Claim 5 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Goldberg in view of Patel as applied to claims 1-4 and 13-16 above, and further in view of Koch(U.S.Pat.6,048,304). Goldberg in view of Patel does not show an analog to digital converter at the temperature sensor output. Koch discloses a process of control that shows an A/D converter at an output. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the claimed invention to use an A/D converter at the sensor output because the values are easily stored in a digital memory.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Goldberg'634, Moll, Kobayashi, and Goldberg'149 are cited to show structure similar to the claimed invention.
